- Misplaced modifiers are not near the word they modify
 - Example: If you stay close to the shore for little boats, the risk of sinking is reduced. (For little boats is close to shore and seems to be modifying shore.)
 - Improved: If you stay close to the shore, the risk of sinking for little boats is reduced.
 - Dangling modifier is one in which the word modified is not explicit
 - Example: By staying close to shore, the risk of sinking is reduced. (The word modified, boat, is not in the sentence.)
 - Improved: By staying close to shore, little boats reduce the risk of sinking.
 - Delayed subject -- it or there is nearest the modifier but is not the word modified
 - Example: By staying close to shore, it is possible for little boats to reduce the risk of sinking. (It delays the appearance of the subject, boats, and reduces the clarity of the meaning.)
 - Improved: By staying close to shore, little boats reduce the risk of sinking.

Learn how to correct displaced and hanging modifiers. A modifier is a word, phrase or clause that clarifies or describes another word, phrase or clause. Sometimes writers use modifiers incorrectly, giving rise to extreme phrases and involuntarily humor. The two common types of modifying errors They call displaced modifiers and hanging modifiers. If any of these errors occurs, readers can no longer read without problems. Instead, place, Shooting trying to figure out what the writer wanted to say. the aim of a writer should always be to communicate clearly and avoid distracting the reader with strange prayers or uncomfortable prayer constructions. the good news is that these mistakes can be easily overcome. an out-of-place modifier is a modifier that is placed too far from the word or words it modifies. modifiers out of place make prayer uncomfortable and sometimes involuntarily humorous. incorrect: he wore a bicycle helmet on his head that was too big. correct: he wore a bicycle helmet that was too big on his head. Notice in the wrong prayer, it sounds like your head was too big! Of course, the writer refers to the hull, not to the head of the person. the corrected version of prayer clarifies the meaning of the writer. Look at the following two examples: incorrect: they bought a kitten for my brother who call shadow correct: they bought a kitten that they call shadow for my brother. in the wrong sentence, it seems that the brother's name is shadow. that is because the modifier is too far from the word that modifies, which is kitten. incorrect: the patient was referred to the doctor with stomach aches. correct: the patient with stomach aches was referred to the doctor. Incorrect prayer is read as if it were the doctor who has stomach pains!What the writer means is that the patient has stomach pains. the simple modifiers as alone, almost, joto, almost and hardly often they hear incorrectly because writers often beat them in the wrong place. confuctor: tyler almost found fifty cents under the couch cushions. repaired: tyler found nearly fifty cents under the couch cushions. How do you almost find something? Or do you find it or do notIt's much clearer. A pendant modifier is a word, phrase or clause that describes something left out of prayer.
